(1850–1931)

Farmerville, Union Parish, Louisiana

and

Carlsbad, Eddy County, New Mexico,

Son of Noah Lewis Scarborough & Samantha Fowler,

Husband of Clarendia Jane Ham

by Timothy Dean Hudson

Matthew Addison Scarborough (4 Jun 1850–19 Mar 1931), commonly known as “Matt,” was the only son of Noah Lewis Scarborough and Samantha Fowler [1]. Matt was the sixth child of his parents, so he grew up with five older sisters and three younger ones. In 1860, his third eldest sister, Elvyann, married Hillory Herbert Ham [Sr.] (c1828–12 Apr 1889). Ham had first married Isabella Ann Robinson (15 Sep 1828–28 May 1860), and they had three children before Isabella’s death, including Clarendia Jane Ham (25 Oct 1854–23 Jul 1902), commonly known as “Janie.” She became Matt’s step niece upon Elvyann’s 1860 marriage. Thirteen years later, on 18 June 1873, Matt and Janie married.

Matt and Janie Scarborough settled on a farm along the Wards Chapel Road near his parents and siblings, and they joined the Liberty Hill Primitive Baptist Church to which his parents and sisters belonged. Between 1874 and 1895, they had twelve children [2]. Tragically, their family suffered greatly from diseases that cut short the lives of their children. Six of them died from various childhood diseases as infants or toddlers, and most of their children who survived early childhood struggled with health problems, primarily from the scourge of tuberculosis, or “consumption,” as it was then known. Even in an era when infant and childhood mortality rates remained high, most of Matt and Janie’s siblings had large, relatively healthy families, while they had to repeatedly bury theirs in the cemetery beside the Liberty Hill Primitive Baptist Church [3].

By the spring of 1902, the tuberculosis that had plagued Janie Ham Scarborough for years had left her nearly bedridden. Her family moved her bed either onto or just inside the front porch so that Janie could see her daughters in the yard out front. Matthew and Janie had only one son to survive infancy, and thus their daughters regularly helped to cultivate the family’s farm.

Swarms of biting gnats descended on eastern Union Parish every spring, tormenting the farmers' livestock. The bites of the gnats sometimes resulted in infections that proved fatal to cattle, so during the worst of the swarms, farmers would build fires and fanned the smoke towards their most prized cattle to drive the gnats away.

On 1 April 1902, Janie lay in her bed watching as her twenty-year-old daughter, Mattie Jane, held the bottom of her long dress over a small fire to catch smoke that she then fanned towards their milk cows to drive away the gnats. She stood too close to the flames, and her undergarments caught fire, causing Mattie to panic. In the commotion, Janie jumped from her bed and rushed to her daughter in the yard, attempting to extinguish the flames. Despite Janie's efforts, the accident left Mattie Jane in critical condition with severe burns. She suffered tremendously for twenty-four hours before succumbing to her injuries the next day [4].

Janie Ham Scarborough's desperate attempt to help extinguish the flames that engulfed her daughter led to serious burns on her hands. She suffered from her burns and the increasing effects of tuberculosis until her death three months later, on 23 July 1902 [5].

Matthew and his surviving children continued to operate their farm on the Ward's Chapel Road about seven miles east of Farmerville for the next two decades. Matt's daughter Linnie married in 1905, and she and her husband soon had a family of small children. The Scarborough farm adjoined those of their relatives, including those of his sister, Betsy Scarborough Ward, and her daughter, Dosia Ward Hudson. Matt's daughters were especially close to Dosia and her family. Both Matt and Dosia's children all attended the Hopewell School, located just off the Ward's Chapel Road near their farms. Due to their relatives there, Matt's daughters remained active with the school even after they had reached their early twenties, as shown by this local newspaper article from April 1916 [6]:

HOPEWELL NEWS

Our school closed, Friday, 31st, with a short but interesting programme...The following is the list of names of those who made 100% in the state spelling contest...Elma Scarborough, Ruth Hudson, Bessie Ward,..., Lillian Scarborough, Reita Hudson, Allie Roan, Lizzie Hudson, Era Ham,...,Lelia Hudson,...Evaline Hudson...

For a while, it seemed that the calamities that engulfed Matt's family over the years had abated.

Towards the latter 1910s, Matt's daughters, Ethel and Lillian, began to experience symptoms of tuberculosis just like their mother. Hoping to save his daughters, Matt Scarborough followed their doctors' advice and decided to leave the humid north Louisiana climate behind and move west to New Mexico. He sent Ethel and Lillian ahead by train to the Catholic Sanatorium in El Paso, Texas. In March 1921, Matt loaded his family's belongings, cattle, and yellow pine lumber from Union Parish on railroad cars and left their relatives and church for the move westward. Instead of remaining in El Paso, Matt and his two other children, Elma and Sim, known as “Bud” to his family, went to Loving, a village about twelve miles southeast of Carlsbad, New Mexico. Ethel and Lillian followed them to the St. Mary’s Sanatorium in Carlsbad, where they remained until Christmas Day, 1921 of that year.

Meanwhile, Matt Scarborough’s land at Loving lay near the Pecos River, and Italian immigrants had built aqueducts for irrigation that remain today. Matt and Sim began raising cotton, and although they seemed to like their new home, the drier climate did not help Ethel and Lillian. Their condition continued to deteriorate as the insidious disease progressed. Lillian died on 25 November 1922, just one year after their arrival in New Mexico. Her brother-in-law mailed Lillian’s obituary published in a local paper in New Mexico back to family and friends in Louisiana, who had it published in Farmerville’s newspaper [7]:

Death and Burial of Miss Lillian Scarborough

Miss Lillian Scarborough died at her home on the Wesley farm east of Loving, last Saturday, November 25th at 3:30 o’clock and was laid to rest in the City Cemetery on Sunday afternoon at 3 o’clock. Services were conducted at the home by Rev. Z. T. Moon, and at the graveside Rev. Douglas of this city officiated with the committal service. A large number of sympathizing friends from Loving and vicinity attended the funeral.

The deceased was in her thirty-third year and the death was from Tuberculosis. She and her sister came to Carlsbad about two years ago from near Farmerville, Louisiana and were later followed by the father and Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Cole, brother-in-law and sister. She was a patient at sister’s hospital until December 24th of last year when she went to her father’s home.

While in the hospital, she made many friends among our people, by her many noble traits of character, and is since mourned by all who knew her both in the Loving section and in this city.

NOTE: The above clipping was mailed to us by Mr. A. B. Cole of Loving, New Mexico.

Ethel died two years after Lillian, on 3 February 1925. Her niece sent her obituary back to her hometown of Farmerville [8]:

Miss Ethel Scarborough died at her home near Loving, New Mexico, February 3, at 4 P.M., from that dreaded disease, Tuberculosis. She was the oldest living daughter of Mr. M. A. Scarborough, being thirty nine years of age. She leaves to mourn her loss an aged father, a brother, Sim Scarborough, and two sisters, Miss Elma Scarborough and Mrs. A. B. Cole, who were all with her at the time of her death.

Miss Scarborough’s former home was eight miles east of Farmerville, La. In March, 1921, Ethel and her younger sister, Lillian, who has gone on before, left Farmerville for El Paso, Texas. They did not stay there long, but went on to Carlsbad, New Mexico, where they remained in the St. Francis Hospital until December 25, 1921. They then joined their family on their farm near Loving. All kinds of medical aid was given her, while her devoted sister stood continually over her bedside.

Nothing did any good. Gradually she became weaker, suffering patiently until God called her home. She was not a member of any church, but a faithful believer in the Primitive doctrine.

The funeral services were held February 4th, at the Carlsbad cemetery. There were many friends, both from Carlsbad and Loving, present. Bro. Coxie, the pastor of the Carlsbad Baptist church, had charge of the service.

*Dear one thou hast left us,
And our loss we deeply feel.
But 'tis God that hath bereft us
He can all our sorrows heal.
Yet again we hope to meet thee
When the day of life is fled
And in Heaven with joy greet thee,
Where no farewell tears are shed.*

A Niece.

Their deaths left only Matt, Sim, and Elma, together with his married daughter, Linnie Scarborough Cole, and her family. Matt sold his farm and bought a smaller plot on the Pecos River inside the Carlsbad city limits. He had a smaller house built in La Huerta, the most prominent Carlsbad neighborhood. Matt Scarborough died at his home at 5:30 a.m. on 19 March 1931 at nearly eighty-one years. His family held his funeral that same morning, only a few hours after his death [9]. Just nine months later, Linnie's husband, Ambrose B. Cole, died at only forty-seven years of age. Both Matthew and Ambrose were buried in the Carlsbad Cemetery, in Carlsbad, Eddy County, New Mexico.

Sim and Elma Scarborough lived in their house in Carlsbad until their deaths, with Sim living until 1953 and Elma until 1964. Family photographs document the occasional visits between their cousins in Farmerville that they had grown up with as children and young adults [10].
